

scents of style

A home fragrance that hits all the right notes is the perfect complement to well-designed digs. We asked some of Canada's top designers to share the scents they're savouring this season.

Yanic Simard, Toronto | tidg.ca

"With more than a hundred scents, Saint Parfum's reed diffusers are an artistic and decorative way to fill your home with fragrance. Even better, the company's perfumers can help you craft your very own custom blend. Ça sent si bon!"

REED DIFFUSER No. 13 Japanese Tea Rose $65 US, saintparfum.com.

Timothy Mather, Toronto | trndesignltd.com

"Everything about Ortigia's collection is chic: the logos, the leopard-and-palm tree packaging, the colourways, and most important, the scents. My two favourites are Ambra Nera, a combination of spicy, exotic woods, and Sicilian Lime, with its bitter orange and citrus notes."

CANDLES Ortigia from $40, atdesignhome.com.

Patricia Gray, Vancouver | patriciagrayinc.com

"I've worn Jo Malone's Pomegranate Noir perfume for years, and often get stopped by people who ask what fragrance I'm wearing. I burn the candle when entertaining so my whole home smells like me!"

HOME CANDLE Jo Malone Pomegranate Noir $75, jomalone.com; holtrenfrew.com.

Jonathan Legato, Halifax | jonathanlegato.com

"I make my own home fragrance daily with orange and lemon rinds. Leftovers from my morning smoothie, they'd normally be discarded in the compost. I simply add them to water or unpasteurized apple cider and heat them on the stove. Totally natural and green!"

ORANGE RIND

Ami McKay, Vancouver | amimckaydesign.com

"Subtle and clean, with a mix of lemon and sultry spice, Pacifica's Thai Lemongrass suits my mood for this season. Because it's made with essential oils and denatured grain alcohol, the scent hangs in the air without feeling overwhelming. I leave it on the counter in my powder room for guests to use."

SPRAY PERFUME Thai Lemongrass $24, pacificaperfume.com.

